

If God is Loving, Why is there So much Pain in Life?

Samyia Hamayoon

While God grows our faith through pain, it is not His foremost reason for allowing us to hurt. Paradoxically, love is the greater reason, and God will allow His creation to go through anything in the name of love. For God, love is a higher priority than comfort, enjoyment, and even happiness.

Pain was not part of God's original design. Love, on the other hand, was. God knew that in order for love to exist, free will would also have to exist. In a world where He gave humans the choice to love or hate, He knew some would choose the latter and pain would inevitably be the price. But God chose to not take away His creation's humanity, even though He knew rape, murder, disease, and tragedy would plague our world.

Yet pain breaks God's heart, and so God has taken man's misuse and abuse of free will and redeemed it. God isn't about righting all the wrongs on earth. But, He is about taking the wrongs and making something beautiful of them. And so He constantly offers opportunities for His children to exercise that free will in love towards one another so that some of what has been broken can be remade. Pain offers opportunity for growth in love.

Pain is a unique opportunity for humanity to choose whether it will love God for who He is, rather than for the gifts that He bestows upon His creation. Granted, God loves to give to His children. God wants to be loved for who He is — for His mercy, grace, kindness, compassion, and other attributes — and not because He makes life easy for us.

God allows pain to remind us that our home is not in this world that our real life begins in the after-life, in heaven. He wishes for us to long for that place. And pain has a way of keeping our hope there, rather than on earth. This is a good thing, for heaven promises more wonderful, beautiful things than those which are found here. Earth is for deciding whether we will love one another as well as our Creator; Heaven is where our experience of life will find its fruition.

Free Public Wi-Fi

Sajid Ali

While traveling, almost everyone has the urge and necessity to check mails and share documents with others. Gone are the days when you could do this only while sitting at the desktop computer in your home. This is an age of mobile devices and people usually have many of these with them, such as the laptops, smartphones and others. Almost all of these are Wi-Fi friendly. So, all they need to do is connect to an Internet service provider through the Wi-Fi. Wi-Fi is offered through unlicensed broadcast spectrum or even sometimes through airwaves. A series of antennas need to be installed, which ensure that you will have access to high-speed Internet. These antennas are usually put on top of telephone poles and similar other places. The location of the antennas needs to be selected prudently. Depending on the position where it has been installed, an antenna can offer Internet across a coverage area of about 1,000 feet in radius. I think we should all have free public Wi-Fi.

One reason we should have Wi-Fi is because if we don't understand our assignment we can look up on how to do it. Some students can only ask their parents because they don't have Wi-Fi. This is why we need Wi-Fi. The second reason is because if somebody is lost and they do not have Wi-Fi. They will need Wi-Fi to connect to another person. They can also ask a person where to go but asking a friend is better. The third reason is because when it's cold you can't play outside. If you don't have Wi-Fi you can't play or listen to games and music. This is another reason we should have free public Wi-Fi. The last reason is because you can go online and purchase or find a job or something. You may not have Wi-Fi to connect with the manager or the person you want to buy it from. It can help if you connect with that person. There are my reasons why we should have free public Wi-Fi. I think we would all live better with free public Wi-Fi.

Education

Komal

Education around the globe is considered as the defining feature of economic and social development. We clearly lagged behind in provision of adequate educational resources and also have failed in creating a clear demand for education. It is important to realize that the problems which hinder the provision of education are not just of mismanagement by government but some of them are deeply rooted in the social and cultural orientation of the people. Major factors that hinder enrollment rates include opportunity cost, poverty, cultural constraints, illiteracy of parents and parental concerns about safety and mobility of their daughters. The economic benefits from schooling are particularly doubtful for girls as society approves of Pardah. Society's emphasis on girl's modesty, protection and early marriages may limit family's willingness to send them to school. The cost of education is another determinant for parents to decide whether to send their children; to government schools, private schools or no schools. Cost of education has increased further due to increased inflation parents and society in general has to reshape its preferences and thinking about education for the system to improve. The government has to provide the resources and take steps for promoting education in the country.

The Death of Man Eater

Maira Razzaq

Tiger eat flesh of other animals in the forest. Generally tiger do not kill tigers. A tiger has to be very quick in catching the other animals. But an old tiger or wounded tiger cannot run fast. At such times it can only catch people. People cannot run as fast as animals. Therefore, they became easy prey to tiger or other animals. After eating human flesh once, a tiger will not get any other flesh. Such a tiger is called man-eater.

Once, a tiger in a jungle in Uttar Pradesh in India turned a man-eater. It had killed women and men in the forest. These people had gone into the forest to collect firewood, fruits, roots and other things. After such incident people stopped going into the forest. Then the man-eater started to visit the nearby villages quite often. It killed people or domestic animals. The villages became panicky. The concerned government wanted to do something. It requested Jim Corbett to help the villagers'. He agreed to track down the man-eater. Jim Corbett was an expert hunter. He had developed a lot of experiences with tiger and other wild animals. He was a lover of wild life. He did not like to kill wild animals for pleasure or sport. But he had not hesitated to kill man-eater. This was only to help the people in trouble. Jim Corbett arrived at the village with his rifle. The rifle was a powerful one. It could kill big and strong animals like the lion, the tiger and elephant. He had collected all the information regarding the man-eater. He selected a place. The tiger used to come there often. Jim Corbett built a plate form. This plate form was fixed on a high branch. A young buffalo was tied to the nearby tree. Jim Corbett waited all night.

But the tiger did not come. Perhaps it had scented the hiding man. Jim Corbett changed his plan. He went back to the village. After that the tiger came. It killed the buffalo. Then it dragged the dead buffalo in the jungle. The villagers told Jim Corbett this news. Jim Corbett then went into the forest in search of the tiger. At last he reached the place. He climbed a tree to find out the tiger. The tiger had eaten a portion of the dead body of the buffalo. It was lying at a distance. Slowly and cautiously he followed the track. He found the tiger resting after a good meal. At first he hesitated to shoot a sleeping tiger. But then this was not a good tiger. It was a man-eater. With this thought in mind, he sent two bullets into the sleeping tiger's head. The tiger died at once. The villagers were happy. Jim Corbett was awarded for his bravery.

Communication Barrier

Saad Zeb

Language plays an important role in the process of communication. It is an important element of communication, without it, communication process cannot be done. It is easy for a person to survive in society who has command over various languages because he can easily understand others views and give his own opinions, share and make them easily understandable for others.

There is no problem for person in communication belonging to same community having similar language, while the person belongs to other society such language is not easily understandable and it causes difficulty to communicate with people. So a person belonging to one area of world cannot able to communicate with the people of other area without knowing about their language, so there is national languages of all countries through which people of one country communicate with each other although belonging to different areas and for whole world, there is English language which can be understood and speak in almost all parts of the world to overcome the problem of communication.

There are also some other communication barriers such are age gape, gender difference, cultural difference and any problem in devices for machine communication or machine assistant communication etc. but language is the main barrier and without it communication cannot occur.

Dowry

Paly Shah

Dowry means the materials, objects which is given to the woman at the time of her marriage by parents. This is Islamic right of a woman that she has the share from one/half of the property of father and some people prefer to give dowry as a gift instead of giving property but now dowry becomes a social problem and burden on parents because family of man demands a lot as a dowry from woman's family which everyone cannot afford and some women remain unmarried for whole life due to this issue of dowry and it mentally disturb the woman and her family. Nowadays dowry becomes a business. Women are selling by the name of dowry. When a family of man invites for marriage the family of woman they demand 6 to 12 lac rupees or car or house as a dowry from her family and if they do not agree to give them then marriage cannot occur so women remain unmarried. Dowry not only a single problem but also creates many other problems in the society. Now this is the foremost duty of religious scholars to talk on dowry with Islamic perspective so people come to know about this problem.
